

1st Organizing Creativity – Transalpine Paper Development Workshop

12-13 May 2023

@ JKU – Johannes Kepler University Linz, Austria

The First Creativity Paper Development Workshop is an opportunity for academics to develop their ongoing work, empirical or conceptual, related to creativity, broadly defined. The workshop will be developmental with each paper having as a discussant a senior scholar with a track record of multiple publications in creativity. Authors will also receive feedback from peers with similar research interests.

It should be of special interest to colleagues who recently graduated with a Ph.D., and doctoral students with quite well-developed manuscripts; scholars more advanced in their careers are also welcome to attend.

This workshop aims to become an annual opportunity for early scholars in Business/Management to establish themselves in the vibrant international community of scholars interested in the study of creativity. It aims to initiate and support a budding community of Europe-based researchers with a shared interest in creativity and to offer them an environment to come together, know each other as well as established scholars, benefit from close interpersonal relations, and initiate new exciting collaborations.

We see this workshop as an opportunity to develop a standing working group on creativity, especially among Central and Southern European Universities.

Application and Selection

We encourage applications based on abstracts of around 500 words. The deadline for submission of abstracts is 11.59 pm, January 25th, 2023. Email for submission: creativity@jku.at Participants will be selected based on the abstract they submitted. Notifications of acceptance will be communicated by mid-February, 2023.

Once accepted, early scholars will be asked to submit a full paper by 11.59pm, April 18th, 2023. Papers will then be electronically distributed by the end of April 2023.

And, to promote constructive and developmental discussions, we ask participants to read a selection of papers, they will be invited to discuss at the workshop.
